WOODCHURCH is an ancient village and large parish and polling place in the Mid division of the county, Tenterden union and county court district, Blackburn hundred, lathe of Scray, rural deanery of South Lympne and archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury, 6 miles north-west from Appledore station, 4½ from Ham Street station and 5½ north-east from Tenterden. The church of All Saints consists of chancel, with north and south chapels, nave, aisles, north porch and a western tower with spire, containing a clock and 6 bells: it stands on high ground, on the borders of Shirley Moor and was erected by one of the ancient family of Woodchurch, which took its name from this parish and exchanged it for that of Clarke on succeeding to Mountford, in Kingsworth; the church is a large building of stone and its prevailing features are those of very good Early English, the interior being decidedly grand and imposing; arcades of four arches, on columns of black Bethersden marble, alternately circular and octagonal, divide the nave and aisles: the north porch has a parvise, with a staircase door opening into the north aisle and a like staircase, north of the chancel arch, formerly led to the rood-loft: the chancel is a remarkably fine example of Early English work and has three sedilia ascending eastward, a double piscina and on the north an aumbry: the tower is also Early English, but has a Decorated west window: the font is an Early one, with a bowl of black marble, sculptured with a rude Norman arcade and stands on a cylindrical stem, with shafts at the angles: there are also many ancient monuments to the Woodchurches, Clarks, Harlakendens and others: Sir Simon de Woodchurch, buried in this church, was one of the Kentish nobles knighted at the siege of Caerlaverock by Edward I. and surnamed "Malleus Scotorum," or the Hammer of the Scotch: Sir John Clarke, who distinguished himself at the battle of Poitiers, is also buried here: in the south chapel is a fine late tomb of marble to Sir Edward Waterhouse, Chancellor of the exchequer in Ireland, ob. 1591: there is also the brass of a priest, said to be Nichol de Gore, with an inscription in French, in Lombardic characters, circ. 1320:

the church was restored in 1846: there is a memorial stained window. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1539: marriages and burials from 1538. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £537, with residence, in the gift of the archbishop of Canterbury and held by the Rev. Francis Ballard Wells M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The charities amount to £28 yearly. There are Wesleyan and Bible Christian chapels. In some excavations in the parish traces of a Roman road were discovered. Henhurst, the residence of Mrs. Schreiber, is pleasantly situated in a park, surrounded by woods, plantations, and grounds tastefully laid out. William Deedes esq. is lord of the manor. There are several landowners. The soil is heavy; subsoil clayey. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats, and there are about 80 acres of hops. The area is 7,000 acres; rateable value, £8,289; the population in 1881 was 1,240.
